

Emory University Bioethics Post-Doctoral Fellowship
Application deadline: January 15, 2022

The Emory University Center for Ethics is pleased to invite applications for a Bioethics Postdoctoral Fellowship. We are seeking a uniquely qualified applicant that will pursue bioethical research as well as engage in curricular development, teaching and educational programming within our MA in Bioethics program.

The term of the fellowship is two years, beginning the Summer or Fall of 2022. The Fellow will have access to a wide range of benefits at Emory University including a competitive salary, health benefits, and teaching opportunities. The Fellow will also receive mentorship and career advising to support their professional development and help them succeed in a variety of bioethics-focused careers.

The Emory Center for Ethics values and encourages diversity. We welcome applications from all qualified individuals regardless of race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, disability, veteran status, or any other characteristic. Furthermore, we desire candidates whose work and scholarship contributes to equitable and inclusive learning and working environments for our students, staff and faculty.

For more details about the Bioethics Postdoctoral Fellowship or to apply, please visit: <https://faculty-emory.icims.com/jobs/80515/job>. For questions about the position, please email mabioethics@emory.edu.